

In reference to the Super Bowl halftime show, the comments made by Jackson and Timberlake were that the incident was an "accident" and a wardrobe failure. If this is true, why was Janet Jackson wearing a tassle cover? It seems obvious that this "stunt" was a planned event by the two performers, and unknown to the NFL, and CBS. As a life long fan of football, I was so put off by the event, that I almost didn't watch the rest of the game. I feel that the halftime show as a whole was an offense, and in particular the exposing of Jackson's breast. For my part, I'd hope that the governing authority of the FCC see's fit that Timberlake and Jackson never appear on public television again.